Regarding the land that was sold and now is called "The Park" in Chanhassen, Minnesota, it was to my understanding that Prince Rogers Nelson had no plans to sell that land ever and according to eyewitnesses who live in the surrounding houses and whom were effected and can provide eyewitness testimony, they were told "they would not lose there raw land view because Prince Rogers Nelson only wanted to develop a small portion but wanted to keep this land as a walking trail and natural land mass for the residences that have been there to enjoy this. Prince Rogers Nelson planed on building a home on this land. Keeping with Prince Rogers Nelson and his charity why are some of the homes located at "The Park" in Chanhassen, MN at least 10% of them at a below average price for the area so that "more" can afford to enjoy a home? Why does "The Park" not have a home give-a-way for a lucky "Prince Fan"? Why does his family, friends or work associates not have a home in this neighborhood if this would have pleased Prince Rogers Nelson? Who made this decision, where is the paperwork of permission to sell this land? Where is the appraisal for the value? Where did the funds go when the land was sold? Who received the money? Where is the paperwork for the terms of the home sales? Why were the former structures like the guard house not kept? Who made the decision to tear down the guard house on the land? Were the heirs afforded an opportunity to keep anything that was found on the land such as the guard house? Was anything found on or under the ground? Who owns the airspace above the land? Was that sold as well? If so to whom? Who owns the minerals in the earth and anything that was found there? If so, who owns it? Where are the appraisals on the soil, air space value? Where is the paperwork of permission from the Estate of Prince Rogers Nelson? What was charged to provided review for all services like this when a transaction is taking place?
