SOCIAL EARLY NEUTRAL EVALUATION (SENE)

(for attorneys and child development specialists)

Is a confidential alternative dispute resolution process with an evaluative component. It empowers parents to determine custody and parenting time arrangements for their children, expedites judicial case management, reduces expensive custody and parenting time evaluations, moves families through court in a timely manner, and maximizes efficiency.

FINANCIAL EARLY NEUTRAL EVALUATION (FENE)

(for attorneys and accountants with five years or more of family law experience)

Parties with one or more financial issue with the expectation that if the parties have the neutral information, they will better able to reach an early settlement before the parties' financial resources are expended on litigation. When parties are able to weigh the costs of pursuing adversarial evaluations and litigating financial issues versus an efficient, economical settlement early in the case, most parties favor the early settlement.
