The Judicial Branch operates through three levels of courts:
The Supreme Court, The Court of Appeals and The District Courts

Method of Selecting Judges: Justice and judges are elected to a term of 6 years in a general election. For the district court, vacancies between general elections are filled by appointment by the governor from a list compiled by the Commission on Judicial Selection. For the appellate courts, vacancies between general elections are filled by appointment by the governor. Justices and judges appointed by the Governor must run for election at the first general election at least one year after taking office.
